

NAVY BERTH OPEN

TO HUSKY PUGILIST

Recruiting Officer O'Brien
Ready to Waive Matter of Overweight.

MANY ENLISTED HERE

There's a certain well known prize fighter in the country. Who has offered to serve to the United States. He is needed in the navy of the United States, the first line of defense. And he will not have any trouble getting into it if he applies to the navy recruiting station, 306 9th street northwest, when he gets in town today.

But O'Brien of the navy station says the navy is looking for just such men, and a little matter of overweight will not affect his chances in the least. That can be easily waived. O'Brien says he will extend an invitation to the man, and if he accepts, he will be sent to the navy station on the way to a training station inside of six hours. That's the kind of men the navy wants, in O'Brien's opinion.

Quartermaster W. G. Pool, another of the young men in the station, says that if the man is a good sailor, he will enlist in the navy he will "take him on" for a few weeks. And a little matter of weight will not stand in his way, either.

Time Now to Act.

The sailors at the navy's station last night had a little time on their hands to think. And they thought this: That it is about time some of the people who are offering their services in letters to government officials should materialize and enlist in the navy or see that their sons or male relatives enlist.

However, aside from that, they had little complaint to offer for the week

They expect to head the list of navy recruiting stations for the number of men obtained. During the week there were 130 applications for enlistment. Seventy-one were rejected and fifty-nine passed the rigid physical test for entrance in this branch of the service.

Out of the latter number thirty-nine went through the final ceremony and are now at the training stations participating in drills to fit them for service aboard ship.

The following were enlisted last night and sent away: James Murphy, 610 E street southeast, and Joseph Goldstein, 634 L street northwest, to the Newport, R. I. training station; William Charles Ryan, 1327 10th street northwest; Emery Arthur Hotchkiss, Centerville, Pa.; Jacob Hasley Fetter, 422 3d street southeast, and Luther Malvin Kettland, 412 South Lee street, and his wife, are going to the Norfolk, Va. training station.

Pay Increases Up to Men.

Those in charge of the navy station say that many parents would permit their sons to enlist if they could be made to understand that their sons would not get the $17 a month during the entire period of their four-year enlistment. They want it made plain that a man can advance rapidly in the navy, and that he will receive a $100 rating, and by the end of his four years, if he has made good, he will be getting about $80 or $100 a month.

Applications for enlistment were received at the Marine Corps enlistment office, 407 Star building. Those in charge say that the applications show that what they may expect the Marine Corps, for it is an organization tion where only the best can be accepted, as it is a service that will try the best of men. Aside from the big engagements which it gets in from time to time, there are always some small tiits on foreign soils which the cable never tell about.

Gunner Sergt. Cornell, on duty at the recruiting office, has been in many of the little and big affairs, and can see an appeal in the idea of a man who has ever bit of land on the globe and who the Marine Corps has done there. The man can decide from a talk with this recruiting agent whether he wants to get into the corps or whether it is too much for him.

Applicants for enlistment in the corps made at the station last night were: Herbert P. Newman, 20 Rhode Island avenue northwest; Aloysius M. Finn, 1901 Lincoln avenue northeast; George A. Tangorra, 477 C street southwest; Harry Rosenthal, 1118 8th street northwest; and William J. O'Connell, 1118 8th street northwest; Leroy C. Combs, 311 Franklin vania avenue; Joseph A. Smith, 182

K street northwest; Charles D. Howell,
1734 N street, and Clarence L. Waters,
637 Maryland avenue northeast.
